RE: Database Conversion to birth month license expiration - Update

Effective March 1, 2010, the Pennsylvania Insurance Department has finalized the conversion for individual insurance producer and title agent licenses to a birth month expiration date.

This birth month conversion moved your license expiration date to the last day of your birth month but will not impose any additional license fee, shorten your license period or increase your continuing education requirement for this license period.

All insurance producers and title agents should print a new copy of the individual license from our website that indicates the new expiration date, which should be the last day of their birth month. Access the license print feature at www.insurance.pa.gov and then click the left side icon "Services for Producers and Other Licensees".
